

Table of Contents

Introduction	1
Part One—Institutional Level Preparation for Program/Unit Assessment Implementation	5
Chapter One—Development of the Institutional Effectiveness/Assessment Movement	7
Development of the Learning/Service Improvement Aspect of Institutional Effectiveness	7
Federal and State Interest in the Development of the Assessment Movement for Accountability Purpose	10
Compatibility of Assessment Initiatives Concerning Accountability and Learning/Service Improvement	10
Chapter Two—The Institutional Effectiveness Concept, Its Place within a Context of Institutional Planning Activities and Its Implementation Through the Five Column Model: An Overview	13
The Institutional Effectiveness Paradigm	13
Relationship to Other Types of Institutional Planning and Management	16
Description of the Five-Column Model	21
Chapter Three—Structures, Plans, and Strategies for Institutional Effectiveness/Assessment Implementation	25
Issues in Assessment Planning	26
Planning of the Assessment Process at the Department/Unit Level	29
Implementation Timing and Logistics	33
Preparing the Assessment Plan	34
Incorporation of Institutional Effectiveness/Assessment into Existing Institutional Procedures	34
The Separate Annual Institutional Effectiveness Cycle	38
Identification of the Causes for Failed Previous Campus Implementation Efforts	45
“Selling” Implementation on the Campus	46
Continuation of the Process Between Reviews	47
Chapter Four—Roles in Institutional Effectiveness or Assessment Implementation	49
Institutional Level Roles and Functions	49
The Role of the Faculty and Staff in Implementation	51
The Assessment Committee	53

Leadership and Resources for Implementation	55
Academic and Administrative and Educational Support Leadership	58
Chapter Five—Establishing the Expanded Statement of Institutional Purpose	60
The Institutional Mission Statement	61
Institutional Goals	62
Insuring that the Institution Has Evidence of Its Effectiveness	62
Development of the Expanded Statement of Institutional Purpose (ESIP)	66
Problems Frequently Encountered in Preparing the Expanded Statement of Institutional Purpose (ESIP)	67
Part Two—Implementation of Institutional Effectiveness Within Instructional Programs and Administrative and Educational Support Units	71
Chapter Six—Preparing Statements of Intended Educational (Student Learning) Outcomes in Instructional Programs	73
What Is an Instructional Program?	73
Why Do We Really Need to Establish Statements of Educational or Student Learning Outcomes?	74
Describing Educational (Student Learning) Outcomes as Opposed to the Educational Process	74
Outcomes Concerning Growth, Change, or Value Added	75
Desirable Characteristics of Statements of Intended Educational (Student Learning) Outcomes	75
Examples of Intended Educational (Student Learning) Outcomes	80
Potential Problems in the Preparation of Statements of Intended Educational (Student Learning) Outcomes	80
Chapter Seven—Identification of Means of Assessment and Criteria for Success	85
Approaches to Assessment, Eliot Elfner , Contributing Author	85
Locally Developed vs. Standardized Cognitive Means of Assessment	89
Use of Class Grades as a Means of Cognitive Assessment	93
Standardized Cognitive Examinations	95
Locally Developed Cognitive Measures	99
Attitudinal Means of Assessment	100
Performance Type Means of Assessment	109
Developing Rubrics as a Means of Assessment, Eliot Elfner , Contributing Author	110
Behavioral Means of Assessment	115
Establishing the Criteria for Success	117
The Program Assessment Plan	120
Chapter Eight—Doing Assessment and Using Results in Educational Programs	125
Issues Concerning Assessment Activities	125

The Nature of Assessment Results	129
Using Assessment Results for Improvement	132
Chapter Nine—Implementation of Assessment Procedures to Improve Services in Administrative and Educational Support Service Units	141
Introduction	141
Developing an Understanding	142
What Is Considered an Administrative and Educational Support (AES) Unit?	142
A Six-Step Assessment Process for Administrative and Educational Support Units	143
Part Three—Assessment Activities Regarding Specific Types of Educational Programs (Two-Year, General Education, and Graduate Level) and Documentation	163
Chapter Ten—Assessment in General Education, Eliot Elfner, Contributing Author	165
Coordination of General Education Assessment	165
Approaches to the Assessment of General Education	167
General Education Outcomes	169
Cognitive Means of Assessment in General Education	173
Attitudinal Assessment of General Education	175
Performance Assessment in General Education	175
Behavioral Observation as a Means of Assessment in General Education	176
Assessing Values as Part of General Education	176
The General Education Component of Occupational Oriented Associate Degree, Diploma, and Certificate Programs	178
Concluding Comments Regarding Assessment in General Education	178
Chapter Eleven—Assessment in Two-Year Colleges, Fred Trapp, Author, and Cheryl Cleaves, Contributing Author	185
Introduction	185
Stakeholders and Governance—Implications for Assessment of Student Learning	186
Processes and People—Implications for Assessment	192
Students—Implications for Assessment of Student Learning	194
Programs—Implications for Assessment of Student Learning	196
Articulating Learning Outcomes	198
Exploring Means of Assessment	200
Liberal Arts/Major Preparation/Transfer Programs—Learning Outcomes Assessment	206
Developmental Studies Programs—Student Learning Outcomes Assessment
Cheryl Cleaves, Contributing Author	213
Conclusion	216
Works Cited	219

Chapter Twelve—Assessment Issues in Graduate and Professional Program
Margie Hobbs, Author	222
Differences in Assessing Undergraduate Programs and Graduate and Professional Programs	222
Intended Educational Outcomes for Graduate and First Professional Level Programs	223
Means of Assessment in Graduate and Professional Level Programs	226
Issues in Assessing Graduate Education	229
Concluding Comments	229
Chapter Thirteen—Documenting Assessment
Daniel Weinstein, Author	234
Keys to Effective Documentation	234
A Solution to Documentation Issues: The Assessment Record Book	235
Form A – Title Page	239
Form B – Linkage Page	239
Form C – Educational Outcome Report Page	239
Maintaining the Documentation	240
Documenting Assessment: Issues to Consider	240
Assessment Software Packages	241
Summary	241
Works Cited	241
Resource Section	243
Standardized Assessment Tests – Paul Cunningham	244
Attitudinal Assessment Surveys – Daniel Weinstein	257
Appendixes
Appendix A. Examples of Expanded Statements of Institutional Purpose	297
Appendix B. Outline of Twelve-Month Sequence of Events for Preparation of Expanded Statement of Institutional Purpose	309
Appendix C. President’s Insert for Letter to Faculty and Staff Concerning the Implementation of Institutional Effectiveness and the Use of Results	312
Appendix D. Assessment Record Book Instructional and Administrative and Educational Support Examples	313
Appendix E. Comment Sheet for Committee Review of Assessment Plans and Reports	327
Appendix F. Issues Relating to Assessment of Distance Learning	329
Appendix G. Assessment Glossary Example	332
Index	335