Nate Heying had the opportunity to do his internship through the Waterloo Bucks. The Waterloo Bucks operate on very little staff, with the only full-time employees being Dan and Charlie. They offer internships in the fall, spring, and summer for others to gain experience in the field.

The job task that Nate finds the most interesting is the contacting of the former Bucks players and finding out how they are currently doing in the majors/minors.

For those pursuing an internship or co-op experience, Nate recommends getting all that you can out of it. From learning the different aspects of the business to doing all that you can that pertains to your interested career field, especially if you enjoy what you are doing. Through his experience at the Bucks, he now knows that he wants to start his own business or obtain a sports degree.
