American University of Antigua

The American University of Antigua was founded in 2004 by world-class American physicians and medical education professionals, subsequently joined with Manipal University, to create an educational institution on the twin island of Antigua and Barbuda, that would provide a comprehensive modern learning facility for students who aspire to become highly skilled, compassionate physicians and nurses, who plan to practice throughout Canada, the United States and the Caribbean region. This realization would have been hard to imagine in January 2004 when the school first opened its doors with a handful of students. Today, AUA is a growing and vibrant medical school with over 1,400 students, a brand new School of Nursing, and a brand new $60 million dollar campus (under construction)

KPMG LLP

KPMG's Audit practice uses a methodology that transforms the audit process from a traditional compliance-driven function to a risk-based approach by creating a framework for auditors to assess how a client's business risks affect financial statements. This approach offers a more comprehensive view of how a client's specific risk environment affects its financial reporting.

KPMG is currently seeking Bachelor of Accountancy and Master of Accountancy candidates at accredited colleges/universities for entry-level audit positions. Job responsibilities can include audit-related tasks performed for a variety of clients. KPMG's Audit practice focuses on helping to ensure the integrity and transparency of financial information, while identifying the key business issues affecting those results.
