

400:118g History and Systems of Psychology - Gilpin, Sp 2008

Exam 4 Essay Topics. Write on #1 OR #2; 1-page answer should be adequate.

1. In the 1960's, both Humanistic psychology and Cognitive psychology attracted numerous advocates, but neither managed to become a basic intellectual school in the same way that Behaviorism, Functionalism, Introspectionism, Psychoanalysis, and Gestalt Psychology did. Which do you think came closer, Humanistic Psychology or Cognitive Psychology, and why?

OR

2. If you had been a typical Neobehaviorist, which competing school would you have found more appealing: Psychoanalysis, or Gestalt Psychology--and why?