

Death, Grief, & Bereavement

Presented by Kyle L. Kostelecky, Ph.D., Associate Professor of Family Studies
University of Northern Iowa

Older persons are no strangers to death and bereavement

Older people

- Experience more deaths of persons close to them.
- Go to more funerals.
- Talk and think more about death.
- Probably have more brushes with death.

Lifelong Interactions

- Family ties continue over the lifetime and may persist beyond death.
- Bereavement can have a considerable impact
 - on individuals
 - on families
 - within and across generations

Impact of death on the family

- Emotional shock waves can affect:
 - individuals
 - each generation
 - the whole family system

The death of a family member represents

- Loss of a family's link with the past.
- Loss of future interactions.
- a sense of presence, that even after death may persist and remain meaningful for survivors.

Impact

- A determining factor for a family's response to a death is the age of the person who has died.
 - “How old was you relative?” is an often asked question.
 - The older the family member, less of an impact it is perceived to have.

Anticipation

- The person's decreased physical and mental functioning can trigger bereavement for incremental losses well before the death.
- This is often referred to as “partial grief.”

We often anticipate

- Even in the absence of chronic illness, the person's family may begin
 - Spending more time with the dying person.
 - Discussing funeral plans.
 - Discussing feelings.
 - Helping relatives plan for the future life without the dying family member.

...but we don't talk about it

- Family members don't openly discuss the "final career" of dying with each other.
- This may have more of an impact on the ability to grieve in a healthy manner.

We think about it, we just don't talk about it

One survey revealed:

- 30% of the next-of-kin knew but talk about it.
- 41% say they don't talk about it at all.
- Of those that did talk, 75% said always dying person who brought it up.
- 86% think about these things a lot.

Disfranchisement

- "Pecking order"
- Less socially disruptive
- Fewer funeral rituals
- US society frowns on expressions of grief and bereavement
- Encourage denial and self-control
- If the lives and deaths of older adults have reduced social value, then even the grief of the survivors is devalued.

Bereaved family members

- Experience fewer physical symptoms.
- Experience lower levels of bereavement.
- are the least depressed.
- are least preoccupied with the deceased.
- experience the lowest proportion of somatic complaints

Though, of course, the death is not insignificant.

Normative life course transition

- As people enter middle-age
 - 25% have experienced this kind of death
- As people leave middle-age
 - 75% have experienced this kind of death
- Middle-age is about a 15-year span from the late 40s to the mid 60s.

Impact of parent death on middle-aged children

- Typical emotional responses include
 - Being upset.
 - Crying.
 - Having painful memories.
 - Experiencing loneliness.
 - Being preoccupied with thoughts of the parent.

Impact

- Depression as a primary outcome measure
 - Though depression is not to be confused with grief.

- Change in sense of “self”
 - Women (daughters)
 - Loss of natural buffer

Impact on Family

- No real major shift in family relationships
- Adult child’s marital relationship does take a hit
 - Up to 30 months after
 - Especially true if the deceased person had a central family role
 - Head of clan, kinkeeper, etc.

Background characteristics associated with the impact

- Poorer adaptation happens for
 - Younger adults
 - Unmarried adults
 - Those experiencing the death of a mother
 - Those experiencing the death of the first parent
 - Those with higher incomes & education
 - Daughters initially by the death of their fathers

Quality of parent-child relationship

- Conflicting evidence
 - Some suggest that closer relationships produce greater levels of depression and poorer adaptation when the parent dies.
 - Others suggest a close parent-child relationship is associated with resolution of the death and acceptance of the loss.

Context of the death

- Heavy caregiving
- Nursing home
- Distant
- Light caregiving
 - significantly more grief
 - less acceptance
 - more thoughts of future reunion than those with parents in nursing homes

“Selfish Grief”

- The adult child controls their expression of deep sadness because it would be selfish to wish their parent to continue to live and suffer .

For Caregivers

- Perceived caregiving as more difficult than losing the person—they believed the strain of bereavement was greater.
- Well-being improves in the year following the death for caregivers, though.

.....

If you would like more information about this topic or would like to provide suggestions for future topics, please contact the Iowa Consortium for Applied Gerontology. Established in 2003 at the University of Northern Iowa, the Iowa Consortium for Applied Gerontology focuses on developing timely and accessible educational programs for Iowa communities. IaCAG provides services and opportunities for Iowa's senior population, service providers, education professionals, businesses, students, and family caregivers. Visit www.iacag.org or call (319) 273-7961 for more information.